Angus Mohr comes to Broomfield

Broomfield Cultural Affairs presents Angus Mohr Saturday, July 23, at 7 p.m. at the Broomfield Auditorium, so buckle your kilt and get ready to rock!

Angus Mohr revitalizes traditional Celtic music's brogue with an American blues accent while rejuvenating rock 'n roll with 'pipes and pennywhistles. Welded together not by genre, but by philosophy, the music embodies resistance to oppression and freedom's fight.

These four men in kilts prove that you don't have to wear saggy pants or skinny jeans to join the musical revolution. Welded together not by genre, but by a philosophy that embraces resistance to oppression and the fight for freedom, Angus Mohr crosses musical boundaries to pull in a diverse audience where fans steeped in blue collar classic rock, hippies old and young, grown-up metal heads, and the occasional post-industrial punk, dance to timeless music about timeless ideas.

Tickets: $12 general admission, $9 seniors and students. Available at the box office or online anytime at www.brownpapertickets.com/event/169433
